32. Future plans:

As a teacher, I can contribute to the students, institution, and education system in several ways. Firstly, prioritizing student-centered learning by engaging students in active learning activities, group discussions, and case studies. Creating a supportive and inclusive environment where students feel comfortable expressing their opinions and questioning theories.

- Secondly, actively participation in curriculum development to ensure that course materials align with current trends and developments in economics. Integrating interdisciplinary topics to provide a holistic understanding of economic principles. Additionally, incorporating real-world examples and case studies to make the subject matter more practical and relatable for students.
- Thirdly, engaging in research activities to contribute to the body of knowledge in economics. Publishing my research findings in reputable journals and conferences to enhance the institution's reputation and promote academic growth.
- Lastly, collaborating with colleagues and industry professionals to establish partnerships and internships that offer students practical experiences and exposure to real-world economic scenarios. Encouraging students to participate in conferences, competitions, and research projects to foster their academic and professional development.

- By following these strategies, I can make a meaningful contribution to the students' learning experience, promote academic growth within the institution, and help shape the education system by incorporating relevant and practical economics education.
