breeding behavior of Indian Robin Copsychus saularis (Order: Passeriformes; Family: Muscicapidae)
Garima Singh & Anil Kumar
Biological Survey of India, Northern Regional Centre
203, Kaulagarh Road, Dehra Dun-248-005, Uttarakhand, India

ISSUE
Breeding season was initiated during the third week of March with the onset of spring to autumn rains.
Males use diverse songs for territory advertisement and female attraction. Females were also seen to sing brief duration songs, sporadically.
Incubation consisted of context specific two categories of songs, alarm calls and begging calls.
Both sexes participated in nest formation for about 2 to 25 days. The female laid 4 eggs.
Nests were made up of 200 bags with few inner linings, having a shallow cup shaped structure. Incubation was performed by only female individuals, who were seen guarding the nest during incubation phase.
Average incubation period was about 11.75 days. Both sexes participated in parental duties. The young ones fledged in 24 to 28 days. Breeding season terminated in June and July months.

DESCRIPTION OF SPECIES
The Indian Robin (Copsychus saularis) is a common, frugivorous, insectivorous, omnivorous, territorial and sexually dimorphic species. It is a small, stocky bird with a white forehead, white breast and throat, and a greyish-brown back and wings. It is a common bird in urban areas and is often seen in parks and gardens. It is a common bird in urban areas and is often seen in parks and gardens.
